Here are a few near by places that I could think of for camping:

1) Willow Park - Go down Redwood Rd to SR 73 and go about 2 miles to t east to find the camp ground. You may need to make reservations prior to going.

2 & 3) Skunk Hollow and Out in the Junipers - Neither one will need to hav reservation. The camping places on the west side of Utah Lake are freque use for target practice. So be for warned there may be some gun shots fire the area.

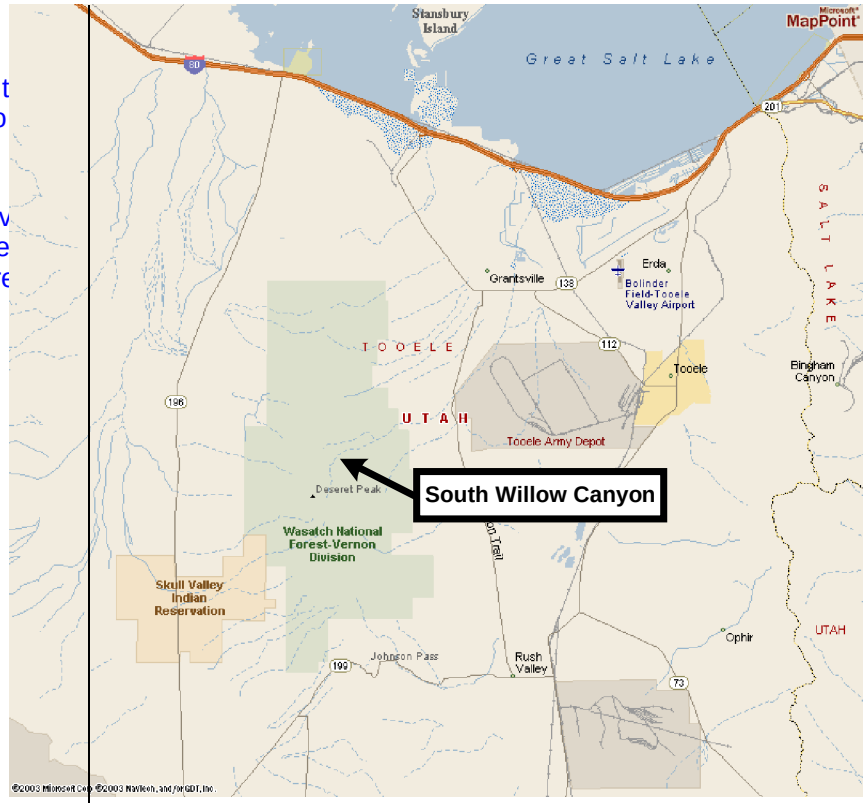
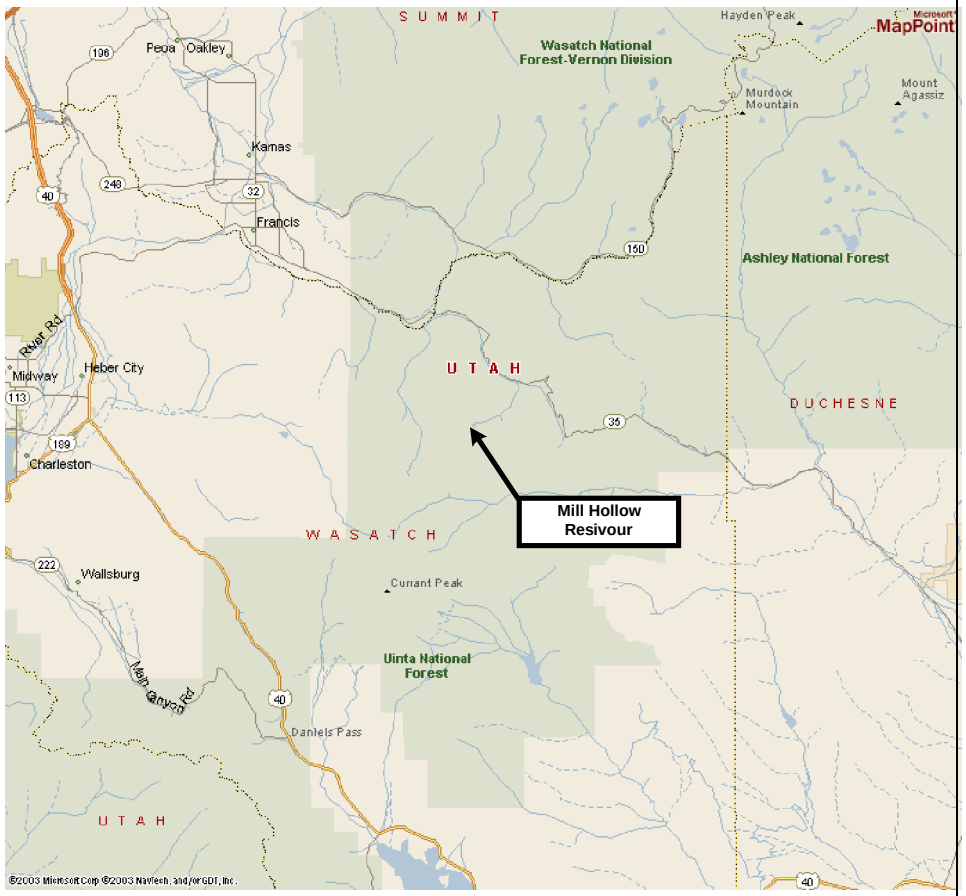
4) South Willow Canyon out side of Grantsville. You will need to make reservations to come this camping spot. Nice camping areas up in the canyon. If your group is into rock climbing, there are some excellent places to climb as you are going to the camp ground. Also, good trails to hike on going to Deseret Peak.



5) Up to the top of Butterfield Canyon and down the west side of the canyon are several nice camping locations.

6) Mill Hollow Reservoir - Small lake that is stocked on a regular basis - Great Mountain Bike Trails - Some campsites will take reservations and several others are first come first gets them - Camp fees are about $5 per night.



7) Up at the top of Little Cotton Wood Canyon - at the top of Alta Ski Resort there is a nice camp ground. Need to make reservations to go to it.

8) Mormon Flats up Little Cotton Wood Canyon - Need to make reservations.
